the clean methods to which we are pledged.

"I believe the so-cailed 'courtesy term' was the chief factor in the election of Mrs Scott. I would have been the last person to have refused this to Mrs. Scott had I not believed her friends had committed her to policies detrimental to the best interests of the society.

"Now that Mrs. Scott is elected, I will do all in my power to support her administration wherever consistent with the policies of the conservative wins of the society. These principles were not assumed as a mere campaign issue. I shall always believe in them. Again I thank my supporters and congratulate Mrs. Scott on her election, and wish her the neight of success."

At her quarters in the Willard Hotel last night, Mrs. Story announced she would, if it was the wish of her party, be a candidate for election two years hence, it being the law of the organization that no defeated candidate shall run consecutively.

To Be a Candidate.

"I believe I have built up a strong backing of followers," Mrs. Story said, "and that they stand for the best form of government possible in any woman's or-ganization. If I am assured by these, my stanch friends, that they desire to see me try again for the office, I will accede to 25c and her speech before the Daughtera.

Mrs. Story was given a reception in one of the committee rooms. Delegation after delegation surrounded her and pledged their support two years hence. They made it plain that Mrs. Scott had only received their votes because it was generally believed she was entitled to the "courtesy term" accorded her predecessors. For the most part the women who pledged support to Mrs. Story have been her strongest opponents in the bitter factional war so long waged.

The reason, it was said authoritatively,
Mrs. Story had not asked the congress to declare Mrs. Scott's election unanimous was because she believed it would not be fair to her supporters, who have struggled in the face of adverse circumstances to place her in the president's chair, and not because of pique at her own defeat.

Mrs. Scott presented to the Daughters and her speech before the Daughters. 50c Mr. Pabian will present, in Plane Recital,

So confident were the Daughters of the Scott faction from the start they had won, a great array of flowers was bought to be rushed to Mrs. Scott as soon as she had taken her place as the announced president general. The Storylies, on the other hand, were not so confident, although not believing it possible their candidate could lose.

It is conceded by both parties that with the re-election of Mrs. Scott peace will reign in the ranks of the D. A. R. for at least a year, the term of her service. The Storylies are compelled to wait two years before their candidate can again be nominated, and by that time the present trouble is expected to blow

Song and Story Enliven the Tenth Annual Feast.

The Vermont State Association gave its tenth annual "sugar party" with an attendance of 600 members and friends last night, at the National Rifles Armory. A reception was held in the upper hal and the banquet followed in the armory. Maj. D. S. Fletcher, president of the association, acted as toastmaster. Toasts were responded to by Commissioner Rudolph, Prof. Newton Preston, of Nebraska; Senator C. S. Page, of Vern and Rev. S. H. Woodrow, of First Congregational Church.

Commissioner Rudolph complimented the association on its activity and spoke of the number of public men their State has furnished the nation. Senator Page in his remarks mentioned the various industries of Vermont, especially the marble, granite, and slate quarries. The Vermont song was sung to the tune of America.
